Svar:

Den fri bevægelighed af varer på EU's indre marked er reguleret dels af harmoniseret produktlovgivning, dels af de generelle regler om den fri bevægelighed, som følger af Traktaten om den Europæiske Unions Funktionsmåde (TEUF) art. 34-36.

Princippet om gensidig anerkendelse følger af EU-Domstolens praksis, der er udviklet i henhold til traktatens bestemmelser om den fri bevægelighed. Princippet gælder for alle varer, som ikke er omfattet af harmoniseret EU-lovgivning. Gensidig anerkendelse betyder, at en medlemsstat generelt ikke kan forbyde, at varer, som lovligt markedsføres i en anden medlemsstat, sælges på dens område – heller ikke, selvom varerne er fremstillet efter andre tekniske regler end dem, der gælder i den pågældende medlemsstat. Kommissionen anslår, at dette svarer til ca. 25 % af alle varer, som forhandles inden for EU.

Som medlemsstat kan man dog lovligt indføre begrænsninger i den fri bevægelighed for varer, hvis det kan begrundes i særligt beskyttelsesværdige hensyn, og hvis begrænsningen ikke medfører en forskelsbehandling af egne og udenlandske varer. Begrænsningen skal være nødvendig og mindst muligt indgribende i forhold til den fri bevægelighed.

Det er EU-Domstolen, der afgør, hvornår der er tale om særlige hensyn, som kan begrunde en begrænsning i den fri bevægelighed. Domstolen har tidligere anerkendt en række særlige hensyn som fx hensyn til den offentlige orden, den offentlige sikkerhed, beskyttelse af menneskers og dyrs liv og sundhed samt beskyttelse af arbejdstagere, forbrugere og miljøet.

Selvom princippet om gensidig anerkendelse som udgangspunkt kun finder anvendelse på det ikke-harmoniserede produktområde, finder det dog også anvendelse i tilfælde af minimumsharmonisering. Minimumsharmonisering medfører, at medlemsstaterne har mulighed for at vedtage nationale regler eller stille højere krav, end EU-lovgivningen anviser.

I henhold til forordningen om gensidig anerkendelse af produkter (764/2008/EF), der indfører en ensartet procedure for anvendelsen af princippet om gensidig anerkendelse i alle medlemsstater, skal hver medlemsstat drive et såkaldt produktkontaktpunkt. I Danmark drives kontaktpunktet af Erhvervs- og Vækstministeriet.

Produktkontaktpunktet har til opgave gratis at informere og rådgive virksomheder og myndigheder i andre medlemsstater om de nationale tekniske regler og produktkrav, der gælder i den pågældende medlemsstat. I Danmark har man valgt at udforme produktkontaktpunktet som en elektronisk portal, hvor de danske regler for varer som udgangspunkt kan findes i engelsksproget version (www.productcontactpoint.dk). Portalen indeholder dels en oversigt over generelle produktregler, som ikke er produktspecifikke, dels en database, hvor det er muligt at fremsøge danske regler efter produktkategori, produkttype og via søgning på fritekst.

Databasen indeholder for indeværende ca. 150 produktspecifikke danske regler, som dækker eksempelvis regler for byggematerialer, fødevarer, kosttilskud og dyrevelfærd. Eksempler på danske regler er bekendtgørelsen om forbud mod ftalater i legetøj (bekendtgørelse nr. 855 af 5. september 2009) og bekendtgørelsen om tilsætning af jod til husholdnings-salt mv. (bekendtgørelse nr. 627 af 29. juni 2000).

Oplysningerne om reglerne ajourføres periodisk. Virksomheder kan også kontakte produktkontaktpunktet via e-mail. En tilsvarende hjemmeside findes ikke nødvendigvis i andre medlemsstater, da der er stor forskel på, hvordan forpligtelserne i forordningen om produktkontaktpunktet opfyldes.

En foreløbig oversigt over de relevante danske regler er vedlagt. Regler under erhvervs- og vækstministerens ressort fremgår af side 12-14. Oversigten er på engelsk, da den elektroniske portal, hvor oplysningerne samles, som nævnt, har udenlandske virksomheder og myndigheder som målgruppe. Af oversigten fremgår nummer på den pågældende lov eller bekendtgørelse samt oplysninger om den ansvarlige myndighed. Regeringen arbejder på at ajourføre oversigten over danske regler. Oversigten vil blive fremsendt snarest muligt.
